Erion English, who has been attending college in Boston, is visiting at his home in Randolph.

Miss Jane Levine has returned to her home in Randolph after a brief visit in Old Orchard.

The date of the annual South Kennebec Fair at South Windsor, always popular with Gardiner people, has been set as September 6-8.

Mr. and Mrs. Tobias McMullen of New York are guests for the summer at the home of Mr. McMullen's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George McMullen, Elm street.

Gardiner girls were bombarded with the query, "Don't you want to vote for me?" all day Wednesday, the questioners being college students in search for magazine subscriptions rather than aspirants for political honors. The boys are canvassing the city thoroughly with good results.

Arthur G. Staples, editor of the Lewiston Journal, has been invited to speak at the supper party to be given by the Gardiner Business and Professional Women's Club, Tuesday evening, Aug. 2, at 7 o'clock at Cove Manor. The committee in charge has made arrangements for the supper and have requested that each member planning to attend let Miss Gertrude C. Crockett, the hostess, know as soon as possible in order that reservations may be made.

Although the temperature of Wednesday was not high in comparison with previous days of the summer, the humidity was so great as to make the day uncomfortable for workers. The half holiday for the proprietors and clerks of stores was a most welcome one this week. It was interesting to note the absence of cars parked in the square in the afternoon, for although one investigator declared that the cars were all owned by Communist Party factory employees, there were but a half dozen or so cars there Wednesday afternoon, showing that those owned by the Water street workers must fill up a considerable portion of the space.

AMUSEMENTS

"The People vs. Nancy Preston, an Underworld Story"

Said to be one of the most dramatic stories of the underworld and prison life ever screened, "The People vs. Nancy Preston," with a practically all-star cast in which Marguerite De La Motte and John Bowers are featured, today at Johnson Opera House.

The story tells of a man, woman and lad who are "framed" by members of a private detective agency, and whose efforts to lead honest lives are nearly prevented by the hounding to which they are innocent are fastened upon them with the result that they find themselves fugitives. The scenes are mostly laid in Sing Sing prison, the famous haunts of crooks and in a peaceful village.

Miss De La Motte appears as a woman with a past, while Mr. Bowers plays the part of a convict who makes up his mind to walk the straight and narrow path. Frankie Darro, one of the best juvenile players of the screen, is seen as Bubby, the son of Nancy, portrayed by Miss De La Motte. Harry Langdon's latest comedy and Pathe Fables round out the program.—Adv.

Methodist Church S. S. Picnic at Island Park

The annual Sunday school picnic of the Highland Avenue Methodist Episcopal church was held at Island Park, Wednesday, of the most enjoyable occasions in years being reported by those who attended. A special car laden with happy kiddies left the square at 10 o'clock and the return trip was made late in the afternoon. A number of adults went out later in the day and joined the boys and girls. A regular outing with field events, games and boating was enjoyed, and basket lunches were served.

Gardiner Librarian Speaks Before Rotary Club At Noon Lunch

The library of today was termed "a huge gateway where all ages and all sorts of people are passing, an introduction to a land of dreams and hopes and longing which brings happiness at each meeting," by Miss Martha Bartlett, librarian of the Gardiner Public Library, who addressed the members of the Gardiner Rotary Club at their regular weekly luncheon session at the Johnson House Wednesday noon. Miss Bartlett declared that the library is complete without its library. It is that part of the educational system that teaches everyone. The statement, "Show me your library and I can judge your town" may be rather a broad one, but is in a great part true. The education and promotion of a group may be partly judged by a land of dreams and hopes and longing which brings happiness at each meeting. If the library is centrally located, it radiates social and happy atmosphere, if remotely placed it is a magnet that draws all of that part. Library work is divided into three departments, educational, constructive, and business. A library is under much the same management as schools, its aim for the being children to bring them the best in literature which the schools are always trying to do. Students not finishing school look to the library for help along general lines. Teachers expect to find books for their use. Parents seek information for purchasing and home use. In short, the library is in one the pupils' reference and research library, always on hand and ready to use. The constructive side of the work of the library is hard to define but of great importance. Each department needs re-building, and well planned buying is necessary. Standards of work and ideals must be upheld and fostered and a library itself must be open to new thoughts and ideals, she must help rebuild the community.

The business end of library work is and will be for many years a great problem. The Maine Library Association is making this year the library maintenance their slogan and will try to solve this problem. Gardiner at present receives from the city $2700, from fines, $500, from the state somewhat over $200, invested funds, $120. The total income is in the neighborhood of $400. Other $2000 which is necessary to have to run a library is made up in gifts.

In closing Miss Bartlett stated that all real success at the library including the installation of racks and inside work was made possible by interested citizens, and a sum equal to that appropriated by the city was thus raised, and asked if any other department of the city had made a better showing. Her talk was most comprehensive and enjoyed by the members as they were given a clearer insight into the activities of the Gardiner Public Library.

The guests at the meeting were A. W. Smith of Newburyport, Mass., H. T. Raeburn of Portland, E. S. Stetson of Auburn, and Henry F. Cummings of Augusta.

The Tomato—Its Origin

Only in recent times has the tomato come into universal favor. In the days of Sir Walter Raleigh and Humphrey Gilbert, when the peopling of North America was just beginning, the tomato was almost unknown in North America and in Europe. It was originally indigenous to South America and may have originated in Peru or some other part of the Andean range favored with an excess of humidity. Years passed before the early colonists realized the plant could be successfully cultivated in these comparatively cold and dry latitudes.

In England as late as the Victorian era tomatoes were regarded as most luxurious, and were grown only in hothouses. It took half a century for English botanists to ascertain that, in favorable summer weather, the tomato would thrive out of doors. Today some of the best tomatoes in England are grown under glass, near Worthing, on the south coast, where thousands of dollars are paid every year to insure the miles of glass necessary.

Some of the choicest tomatoes are now grown on the Island of Madeira, and for years the Canary Islands, particularly Tenerife, have been famous for the quality of their tomatoes to the British market. The Channel Islands are especially adapted to the growth of tomatoes, not only providing supplies for England, but sending their early tomatoes to the United States.

The plant belongs to the same family as belladonna, and was at one time thought poisonous. It is a greedy consumer of water, as becomes a vegetable originally grown in tropical humidity. Italy cultivates the tomato both for table use and for oil obtained from its seed.

Violent Explosive

An explosive so violent that it drove the pieces of its container shot-hole fashion clear through a nearby bottle without cracking the bottle was recently demonstrated, according to Science.

The new substance is divinyl acetylene, product of remarkable new developments in acetylene chemistry at Notre Dame university. As usual, dyes and explosives are bedfellows in this research and a brilliant new scarlet color is one of the results of combining acetylene with coal-tar derivatives. This is the first serious and extensive use of acetylene in chemical synthesis, the gas having heretofore been relegated to the domain of the steel welder.

Citizenship night schools in Alaska are maintained by the Territorial Government, and will be established in any community in which 12 persons signify their desire to enroll. In addition to reading, writing, spelling, grammar, and arithmetic, history of the United States is taught and the fundamentals of good citizenship are inculcated. Pupils enrolled this year include 99 citizens, 104 aliens, and 103 persons who have declared their intention of becoming citizens.

Says Jazz An Art

Paris. —(AP)—Jacques Thibaut, violinist, has returned from his last American tour with a high opinion of American taste in music compared with fifteen years ago. It is no longer possible, he says, to offer a program of mediocre works. He, like Messiaen, tells the French they know nothing of jazz and that in condemning it they condemn a thing they have not really heard.

"The reputation of the American as a lover of no music but jazz," he says, "is as false as such generalizations always are. But don't scoff at jazz. We in France don't know what it really is, we judge by inferior specimens."

"The day I arrived in New York, I heard Paul Whiteman's orchestra interpret 'Circus', a work specially written for him by a great symphonist, Decca. You cannot imagine what new and exquisite sounds it gave. Its orchestration is admirable. Like everything done with taste and entrusted to great artists, it has its value.

"No! No! Jazz is an art for which works that will last can be written."
